

A CONFERENCE

Held By the Operators Monday in New York.

President Has His Eye on Morgan--Hart's Stinging Statement--Twenty-Third Week of Great Strike Opens--Suffering Increases--Commission To Be Named.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 13.—President Baer is conferring today with President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania rail road in the latter's office. General Louis Wagner, is also present.

New York, Oct. 13.—There was activity among the coal presidents this morning and important developments may result. At 11:30 o'clock President Truesdale, of the D. L. & W., President Olyphant, of the D. & H., David Wilcox of the D. & H. railroad, Chairman Thomas of the Erie and President Fowler of the Ontario and Western went into conference at the office of the Delaware and Hudson.

President Truesdale was seen just before entering the meeting room. He said: "There may be a great deal done at this meeting."

Before the meeting began Mr. Thomas asked regarding the report that the operators had decided to post notices granting the men a ten per cent increase in wages. He said: "No ten per cent increase has been granted or even considered."

President Olyphant made a similar denial.

Coal Famine in East.

New York, Oct. 13.—At Newport yesterday, Mrs. E. W. Vanderbilt, in her talk to the Kings' Daughters said she hoped for a speedy settlement of the strike.

From Worcester, Mass., comes the report that 300 children in an orphanage are suffering for lack of coal.

Two men were arrested in New York Saturday for stealing two telegraph poles for fuel. They were discharged in court yesterday. Reports of thefts of coal come from all sections.

Hart's Statement.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 13.—Thomas F. Hart, chairman of the recently organized Peoples Alliance today gave out the following statement:

"The action of Governor Stone in virtually placing this district under martial law is abominable outrage upon a peaceful people. This wicked and vicious interpretation of law was made, not because of any precedent or existing statute but in defiance of them.

"This astounding attempt to intimidate and persecute the miners will meet with prompt resistance.

MATTERS INVOLVED IN THE STRIKE.

The following is an outline of the demands of the striking miners as stated by John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and also a statement of the operators' or mine owners' side of the question:

DEMAND OF STRIKERS.

The demand of the mine workers are, briefly, as follows:

That the working day shall consist of eight hours, with the same wages that are now paid for ten hours' work.

That the miners shall receive an advance of 5 per cent on the contract price now paid.

That coal mined shall be weighed wherever possible; that 2,240 pounds shall constitute a ton, and that the men shall have a representative to check the weights.

That a minimum wage scale for day laborers at the mines shall be established, similar to the scale that exists in the bituminous fields.

That the union shall be recognized. We favor incorporating in the form of an agreement the wages that shall be paid and the conditions of employment that shall obtain for a specific period.

As to the reasonableness of these demands we have proposed to submit to and abide by the award of an impartial Board of Arbitration.

OPERATORS' SIDE.

First. The anthracite companies do not undertake in the slightest manner to discriminate against members of United Mine Workers of America, but they do insist that members of that organization shall not discriminate against nor decline to work with non-union members of such association.

Second. That there shall be no deterioration in quantity or quality of work and that there shall be no effort to restrict the individual exertions of men while working by the ton or car, who may for reasons satisfactory to themselves and their employees produce such a quality of work as they may desire.

Third. By reason of the different conditions, varying not only with the districts, but with the mines themselves thus creating absolutely impossible anything approaching uniform conditions, each mine must arrange, either individually or through its committees, with the superintendent or managers any question affecting wages or grievances.

Applications have been received from fully one-half of the former employees to go to work. A determined effort will be made to resume this week by other operators in the Lehigh region, and slopes are being cleaned up and put in condition. Rumors last night to the effect that notices would be posted this morning offering a five per cent increase, created great excitement among the strikers. No notices were posted, however. Everything is quiet in this region.

Wants Scotch Coal.

Glasgow, Oct. 13.—Lord Provost Chisholm, of Glasgow, today received a cable from President Omor of the Union Canadian municipalities asking for Scotch assistance in the industrial crisis which has arisen from the scarcity of coal caused by the anthracite strike in America. The cable reads: "I ask your kindly assistance for central provinces which are dependent on American coal. Industrial interests are gravely threatened by strike. I hope Scotch mines will give preference to Canadian market." It concludes by asking the mine owners in Scotland for "prices for anthracite and other coal."

Talk of Combining.

London, Oct. 13.—Labor leader Ben Tillett, in the Express today hints that a world's combination of miners is possible to support the anthracite miners in America. He adds that British coal men are already working in this direction by stopping the supply of coal from Wales. Inquiries made by our correspondent this morning do not tend to support the idea that this combination is materializing. It has been discussed it is true, by the miners, but no definite result has been obtained.

Demand Coal.

New York, Oct. 13.—Angered because the coal relief station at 56 Delancey street was closed yesterday, a mob of east side men and women, started to batter down the yard gates. The pleadings of Joseph Cohan the proprietor, and his promise that

GOV. ODELL

May Call New York Legislature in Extra Session Unless Coal Strike is Settled.

Albany, Oct. 13.—Unless there is a settlement of the coal strike within a week Governor Odell will call an extra session of the Legislature to try and have the problem solved in some way. This is the talk of the Republican leaders here, and the Governor's tilt with President Baer a few days ago is considered the surest indication that an extra session will be had.

According to report here Governor Odell has had under consideration two or three plans for relief. One of these, it is said, is an appropriation of $1,000,000 to be used to help work the mines in Kentucky lately offered by a woman owner of that State.

Another scheme is said to be an appropriation to pay the duty on all foreign coal used within the State of New York.

Still another plan is said to be the enactment of a law placing heavy penalties on all railroads within the State that carry coal cars of railroad companies interested in carrying coal.

WHITE HOUSE

Will Not be Ready Until Middle of December So Society Season Will Be Late.

Washington, Oct. 13.—The delay in completing the alterations of the White House will make the society season of the capital late this year. It is believed that the work on the President's house will not be finished before the middle of December. Three or four living apartments and the family dining room will probably be ready for use Thanksgiving day and it is more than likely that the President will carve turkey in the White House on that date, but no entertaining can be thought of until the work is done. The executive office buildings that

NEW ORLEANS STRIKE

Has Been Settled, the Ultimatum of the Governor Being Accepted by the Men--Many Effigies Found in the Streets.

New Orleans, Oct. 13.—The strike of street railway employees, which has effectually blocked traffic on all city lines for two weeks, was settled last night at 6 o'clock by the union almost unanimously accepting the Governor's ultimatum on a secret ballot. Negotiations which began Saturday night continued until 7 o'clock a. m. Sunday when the executive board finally decided to submit the matter to a general meeting of the union Sunday afternoon. The basis of settlement is that the men will go back to work at 20 cents and 10 hours, with a minimum of seven and a half hours a day, no discrimination to be made against any of the men under charges, and as many to be taken back as are needed for the operation of the company's lines. The hitch Sunday morning was on the taking back of the men under charges, but the railroad company finally conceded this, allowing the Courts to decide the guilt of the men.

The strike began Sunday morning two weeks ago and has been effective. Not a single passenger has been carried on a car since it began, and no car has got more than five blocks from the barn.

Sunday morning people awoke to find in different parts of the city stuffed figures hanging to telephone and telegraph poles with all sorts of inscriptions on them. Some represented the Governor, some the Mayor, and there were many representing officials of the railway company.

The credit of the settlement is largely due to W. S. Parkerson, who took up the cause of the strikers Saturday and labored indefatigably all night and all day to convince them that they could hope for nothing better, and that they could not prevail against the militia massed here. United States Senator Foster, Governor Heard and Mayor Capdeville were all instrumental in some degree in bringing about the final result.

AIRSHIP FELL

French Aeronaut Debradsky and His Assistant Morin Were Killed in France Monday Morning--The Machine Seemed Under Control.

Paris, Oct. 13.—M. Debradsky, the French Aeronaut and his companion were killed today by the falling of Debradsky's air ship. They started in a navigable balloon from the aerostation near Vincennes at 7:30 o'clock this morning. The air ship made a successful ascension, sailing, evidently under perfect control. Debradsky's balloon was an egg shaped affair, 110 feet long and 20 feet in diameter at the thickest part. The car was supported on steel wires by a light frame work of wood which ran the entire way around the balloon. The car itself 55 feet long, weighed with all accompaniments about 1,500 pounds. Morin was killed instantly and Debradsky expired a few minutes later.

have been erected between the war, state and navy building will be ready for the President's secretaries and clerks by the first of next month. The heating apparatus is being tested now, and as soon as pronounced satisfactory the office furniture will be moved in. The removal of the clerical force to the new building will leave the entire house No. 22 Jackson Place, for the use of the President and his family.

Lunched With King.

London, Oct. 13.—General Lord Kitchener lunched with King Edward today as a farewell meeting with the King before leaving for India Wednesday.

Uneventful Day.

Wilkesbarre, Oct. 13.—This has been another uneventful day in the great coal strike, the only feature of interest being the fact that a few more men went to work at some of the collieries and washeries in this region, though the number is small. No trouble has occurred today.

DAVID B. HILL

Makes Strong Speech For Public Ownership of Coal Mines.

New York, Oct. 13.—The Democratic state campaign was opened Saturday night in Brooklyn. Speeches were made by David B. Hill, Edward M. Grout, George Raines, and others. Among other statements Mr. Hill declared that "We are confronted with gigantic combinations of corporate capital, monopolizing the productions of the earth, and the manufactures of our artisans, arbitrarily fixing prices making corners in the necessities of life and the extent and multiplicity of whose operations are substantially unlimited by law and uncontrolled by statute, who corrupt legislatures and congresses, and dictate the governmental policies of subservient governors and presidents."

TARIFF REVISION.

Referring to the question of tariff revision, Mr. Hill said: "With over $500,000,000 of surplus revenue in the treasury of the United States, it is folly—aye, it is almost criminal—to further resist a modification of the present exorbitant tariff rates. No good reason can be urged why such revision should not be immediately undertaken."

Mr. Hill arraigned the Republican party for its failure to control the trusts and monopolies. Of the plank of the state platform demanding ownership of the anthracite mines he said:

"The proposition is neither startling, revolutionary, socialistic, nor paternal, but is constitutional, necessary expedient and above all, it is right. It is simply a reasonable and necessary extension of the general policy of public ownership, already prevailing in the municipalities of the country. This proposition does not commit the party to any other project of public ownership whatever their merits, if any there may be."

THE COAL QUESTION.

The coal question Mr. Hill declared to be a national one, saying: "If it is not, way did the president himself recently intervene and summon private citizens to the White House for conference and exercise his official influence in regard to the matter over which he had no jurisdiction? He was not acting under any statute. He had no authority for any legal interference on his part. He himself has made it a national question and he and his party are now estopped from otherwise regarding it. It is a national question because the impending coal famine involves the welfare of the whole people of the United States and such a famine should be prevented from ever occurring again, which cannot be assured under private ownership and control. It is the province of wise statesmanship to provide against just such emergencies in the future. There is no permanent remedy proposed by anybody except that suggested in the Democratic platform."

In London there are more fires on Saturday than on any other day of the week.

RICHARD OLNEY

Receives Great Ovation and Makes Telling Speech on Trusts.

Cleveland's Former Cabinet Officer, Who Supported Bryan, Tells How Laws are Violated by Trusts --Would Settle Coal Strike by Enforcing Laws Against Trusts.

Boston Oct. 13.—One of the features of the present state campaign was the dinner which the Democratic club of Massachusetts tendered Saturday night to Colonel William A. Gaston, the party candidate for governor. Over 250 party followers listened to speeches by Richard Olney, former secretary of state; Charles S. Hamlin, Josiah Quincy, John R. Thayer, congressman from the Third district; Henry H. Hollis, Democratic candidate for governor in New Hampshire, and Colonel Gaston.

Undoubtedly the speech of the evening was that delivered by Hon. Richard Olney, who was cheered for some minutes when he arose. Many greeted him as the next President. Mr. Olney spoke in part as follows:

"Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen:—I welcome the opportunity to declare my belief not only that the Democratic party is now heading in the right direction and is tolerably sure of ultimately recovering its old-time ascendancy but that the result is essential to the welfare of the American people. There is one aspect of the present situation to which I desire to briefly call your attention.

"The vital principle as well as distinguishing merit of our political institutions consists in liberty regulated by law. With the exception of two Cleveland administrations the Republican party has been in control of the national government for a period of more than forty years. Where it has landed us as respects liberty I will not now consider. But where has it landed us as respects law which has no right to the name, unless it is the same for the millionaire and for the beggar.

"The signs of the times are that under the regime of the Republican party, and through the national government, 40 years of partnership with the protected industries, we have come to a pass where public officials as well as private citizens deem themselves above the law.

"Witness the zealous haste with which the treasury rushes to the relief of Wall street speculators by a novel and forced construction of the national banking law. Witness the astonishing proceeding of the same department in its instructions to subordinate officers respecting the duties to be collected on coal. But the generally lawless atmosphere in which protected Republican reign has enveloped us, is even more strikingly illustrated by the recent presidential demonstration upon the coal strike. There are those who say that as the President disclaimed any official duty or relation to the matter he should not have interfered. There is something to be said for that view. Though his office is charged with great powers, the President is a constitutional officer, whose sphere of action is strictly limited by law.

MAY LOSE PRESTIGE.

"Within that sphere he is well nigh absolute—without, he is legally impotent. When, therefore, he goes without it, the danger is that he may fail and be defied and that his great office may lose prestige and power and thus be less capable of performing its legitimate duties.

"The President, for example, is our representative with foreign powers. Will it strengthen his hands that some half dozen private citizens are found snapping their fingers in his face? The President's overtone to the coal operators was prompted by the best motives and should have been treated with respectful consideration. It must have been declined courteously, even if firmly.

PRESIDENT WAS SNUBBED.
"But the opportunity to administer

a snub to the President was too tempting. Accordingly he was not only treated as a rash intermeddler, he was also lectured upon the law and facts of the case, and, to crown all, was notified that the cause of the troubles was lawlessness which he was sarcastically invited to suppress.

"For sheer audacity this attitude of the coal operators could hardly be matched and nothing could more strongly emphasize the disrepute into which the law of the land has been brought by long continued Republican domination.

"Who were they who were so insistent on the suppression of lawlessness in the mining regions? Why, the most unblushing and persistent of law breakers. For years they have defied the law of Pennsylvania which forbids common carriers engaging in the business of mining. For years they have discriminated between customers in the freight charges on their railroads in violation of the interstate commerce law. For years they have unlawfully monopolized interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

"Indeed, the very best excuse and explanation of their astonishing attitude at the Washington conference is that, having violated so many laws for so long, and so many times, they might rightfully think they were wholly immune from either punishment or reproach.

COAL OPERATORS BLIND.
"It is sometimes urged in extenuation of the coal operators' foolishly offensive tone, at the conference, that they were enraged at the recognition of labor unions and the presence by invitation of their representative. If that be so, they must be as blind to the salient facts of the era they are living in as they are oblivious of legal obligations.

"In these days of combination by capital on a scale and to the extent as startling as it is unprecedented, can they possibly imagine that labor is to be denied an equivalent right of combination? If they do, it is only another instance of their complete indifference to the law of the land.

"In 1894 receivers of a railroad were brought into court on a claim that laborers ought not to be discharged because of membership of labor unions. Though the court was a federal court, it sat in Pennsylvania and the petitioners got nothing from the court.

IGNORED THE LAW.

"But what followed? In a year or two Pennsylvania made a criminal offense to deprive a man of work because he belonged to a labor union. In 1898 congress not only did the same thing but, in a statute providing for the arbitration of labor disputes, expressly made labor organizations parties to such arbitration. This was in addition to the previous legislation by congress encouraging and providing for the incorporation of labor unions. In ignoring them therefore, the coal operators simply ignore and condemn the law of the land.

"I will detain you, Mr. Chairman, but a moment longer. In course of the political campaign now going on, Republican orators are sure to wax eloquent in deprecating change. To all such oratory, while there are many good answers there is one that is conclusive.

"Law, supreme and equal, for all men is to the American people what the Ark of the Covenant was to the Hebrews of old. While we have it, we need not fear for our safety; when we lose it, we are far advanced on the high road to ruin. Hence, if we would not enter upon that road, change and sure displacement of Republicanism cannot come too soon or too decisively."

Foraker Still Keeps Defending Trusts.

In a recent speech, Senator Foraker said: "Mechanics, clerks and the class which may be called the thrifty, are, generally speaking, the largest holders of the securities of the great trust corporations. They would not welcome hostile legislation, nor would it be to their best interests."

That was a pretty far fetched defense of trusts, to say the least, and has been widely criticised as a statement so far from the truth as to show how barren the trust defenders are of facts and substantial arguments to bolster up their cause.

The assertion that mechanics and clerks are large holders of stocks in trusts is so absurd that it can only be taken as a mere bluff—like all the arguments Republican leaders have made in defense of trusts the past dozen years.

But Senator Foraker still keeps up his defense of trusts notwithstanding the odium which has been created by the coal strike. At Pomeroy on Saturday he devoted the most important part of his speech to the defense of trusts, boldly saying that they "did more good than harm," and that "they were necessary to carry on great enterprises."

over just now because the high prices of beef and coal has furnished a telling object lesson. But all trusts are alike. They all purchase their special privileges with hard cash that they pay into the Republican campaign fund. They would soon have to go out of the trust business if they didn't keep the Republican party in power.

It is pointed out that Governor Odell's plain talk to the coal operators should have been made weeks ago, when he was indifferent. He could have taken vigorous action against the coal trust through the Attorney General of New York three months ago, but he did not do it. He was not actuated by any political fight then, but he is confronted with a threatening situation now.

If an election were not at hand in which suffering millions have votes, there would be no such efforts as we now see in evidence by Republican leaders to settle the anthracite coal strike.

The hard coal situation could only exist under Republican policies. It is the special favors granted to large corporations by Republican legislation that has produced the existence of such combinations as those controlling the anthracite coal fields. So long as Republicanism controls legislation, that long the country can expect such results as are now producing a coal famine in many places.

The trusts want the Republican party kept in power. This power is promoted by the election of Republican candidates to office, because every such candidate elected to any office adds that much to strengthen trust domination and maintain trust rule.

Why didn't Roosevelt, Platt, Quay, Penrose and Odell go after the coal trust two months ago? The chances are they feared to offend the big coal operators and trust magnates because they have for years been enormous contributors to Republican campaign funds.

It is to the interest of the trusts to keep their party in power and every vote for any Republican candidate for any office is more or less a contribution to trust interests.

Governor Odell of New York has suddenly become interested in the coal strike because he is running for Governor again this year and needs the votes of the thousands of indignant consumers that are facing winter without coal.

The Republican party is the party of the trusts. The candidates of the party of the trusts are, therefore, trust candidates, any professions they may make to the contrary notwithstanding.

If a voter casts his ballot in favor of the Republican party this year for the reason that he thinks he is endorsing prosperity, he must not forget that he is also endorsing the high prices of beef and coal.

Mark Hanna's full dinner pail has turned out to be an empty coal bucket.

The Newark voter who casts his ballot in accordance with Mark Hanna's advice to "let well enough alone" must swallow the whole dose, including coal at $5 a ton.

Will Speak in Newark on Monday Evening, October 20.

These two Democratic orators will address the people in Newark on Monday evening, October 20. The Rev. Mr. Bigelow is the Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, and Hon. Our people should see that the occasion is made a powerful gathering of far-reaching effect.

SOLDIER BOYS WANT BOOKS

Fighters in Philippines Lonesome For Want of Reading Material. Books and magazines are wanted by the soldiers in the Philippine Islands, according to Mrs. H. C. "I am in receipt of letters in every mail from men and officers in all branches of the United States service in the islands pleading for reading of all kinds to help them forget their isolation," said Mrs. Chadbourne the other day to a reporter of the Chicago News. "If persons who have books, novels and late periodicals or magazines they would like to give will send them to me at 3015 Grand boulevard. I will see that the things are packed and shipped so that they will reach the soldiers about Thanksgiving time."

A German Criminal Catches.

Herr Eugen Fasse has hit upon an elaborate method of alarming the inhabitants of a town whenever any great crime has been committed in order to prevent the escape of the criminal. This idea is to erect in all the most public parts of the town booths containing a table, writing materials, telephone and electric bells and in front a large board for the display of notices. As soon as a crime is committed a bell is set ringing, which calls the nearest policeman, who is informed telephonically of the details, and then he promptly writes down and places them on the display board so that he who runs may read. Thus within a few minutes of the perpetration of a crime a public hue and cry is raised which it is hoped may end speedily in the capture of the criminal.

THE VITAL NECESSITY

There is no other one thing with which I have so much trouble as this lack of persistency among advertisers. They lack the nerve to fight long and hard. While they will expend a good deal of cash and energy in making a single plunge, they will grow tired if called upon to expend the same amount through a campaign of six months.

The road to success is an uphill road all the way. Do not try to apart.

For a little way it goes easy, and you get over the ground fast, but the goal seems all the further away when the nervous energy in that spirit is spent. There are but 49 per cent of advertisers who make their advertising pay.

The rest never learned that persistency in advertising is the one vital necessity.

They jumped into advertising without preparation in the way of the money to meet the expense or the experience to keep from wasting it. They failed to consider that the creation of trade through advertising was a long process.—Inland Printer.

WEALTHY MAIL CARRIER.

General Castlemann's Outfit Will Be the Richest in the Land.

General John Breckinridge Castlemann, one of Kentucky's most notable soldiers, politicians, society leaders and breeders of thoroughbred horses, has been awarded a contract to carry the United States mails from Burgin to Pleasant Hill, Mercer county, says a dispatch from Louisville to the New York Herald.

General Castlemann's big blue grass farm is located at Pleasant Hill, and he put in a bid for the mail contract in order to have the assurance that he would get his morning papers and letters regularly. He bid high for the contract, but said if it was awarded to him he would have the mails carried in up to date style. The government officials decided to give the general a chance, and he has just received word that he was the successful bidder.

In accordance with his word General Castlemann will purchase a handsome coach, provided with electric bells and other modern conveniences. It will be drawn by four snow white Kentucky thoroughbreds and their harness will be mounted with silver. He will employ a driver, a footman and a trumpeter, and each will be in livery of the latest mode and cut.

General Castlemann says he will lose about $12,500 a year on the contract, but he will know that his mail will come regularly and that guests in his country place will have a pleasant journey to be home. His plans will give the United States the most fashionable mail route service in the country.

FULL TEXT

Of the Platform Adopted at the Democratic State Convention.

In state convention assembled, we, the Democrats of Ohio, hereby acknowledge and declare our continued allegiance to the Democratic party of the nation and on national issues reaffirm and endorse the principles laid down in its last national platform adopted at Kansas City, and which was fully and ably represented in the presidential campaign of 1900 by William Jennings Bryan. Regarding those principles as opposed to imperialism and colonialism, as opposed to government by injunction, as opposed to trusts and trust-fostering tariffs, as opposed to financial monopoly and as opposed to all other legalized monopolies and privileges, we condemn every effort to repudiate or ignore them.

In state and municipal affairs we pledge our party to a faithful application of those Democratic principles, to the end that the burdens of taxation may be equalized and home rule and local self-government be established and preserved.

REPUBLICANS ARRANGED.

Under the long continued control of the Republican party in this state, monopoly has been fostered and protected; the farmer and the small home owners have been burdened with excessive taxes that the beneficiaries and favorites of that party might be permitted to escape their just share of the public burdens; our public institutions have been wastefully and inefficiently managed and in them scandals and cruel wrongs have been practiced upon the defenseless wards of the state; the farmers and small shippers continue to suffer from unjust discrimination at the hands of unregulated monopoly; the fine system of municipal government has been wrecked and the credit of cities destroyed, thereby producing a spirit of insecurity and unrest in all public affairs. The people can no longer trust the administration of their affairs to a party thus recklessly devoted to interests adverse to the public welfare. As a more specific statement of our principles upon these and other public question we declare:

TAXABLE PROPERTY.

1. That all taxable property should be appraised by assessing boards which should be in session for at least a part of each year and whose proceedings and deliberations should be open to the public; that power be given to employ a representative to present the interests of the public in hearings before these boards and that in making assessments all property should be appraised at not less than its saleable value.

2. That the present laws for assessing the property of steam railroads and other public service corporations should be so changed as to compel the assessment of those properties at not less than their saleable value as going concerns and to prevent their evasion of just taxation.

CLASSIFICATION.

3. That to prevent evasion of state taxes by discriminating valuations, a separation of the sources of state and local revenues should be made. And to that end, we heartily endorse the constitutional amendment now pending before the people and to be voted on next year, which will permit classifications of taxable property.

4. That all public service corporations should be required by law to make sworn public reports and that the power of visitation and examination over such corporations should be given to the proper auditing officers to the end that the true value of the privileges had by such corporations may be made plain to the people.

FREE PASSES.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]
In the spring of 1870 a whaler named the Emily Benson left St. John's, N. F., for a trip to the polar sea and was not heard from.

Seventeen years after the sailing of the Benson the Discovery set out from the port of London for a polar cruise. She was sent out under the auspices of the Royal Geographical society, and when not heard from for almost two years a vessel called the Rescue was dispatched to look for her, and I was one of the crew of the latter. Reaching North Lincoln, we searched the coast.

On the fifth day we made our find. We had toiled to the crest of a rocky range, which crossed our path and extended inland a long way, when three or four men simultaneously caught sight of a ship in a bay a mile away, but which seemed at our feet. The first thought was that we had traveled in a circle and come back to the Rescue, but the second glance showed us that this craft was a full rigged brig and the bay was a strange one to us. We cheered and waved our caps, and every man of us was highly elated as we hurried along down the slope to board the stranger. The thought that she might be a derelict did not occur to any one until we were close upon her. The bay was but a cove, not more than an acre in extent. The brig was not lying in the waters of the cove at all, but among the rocks on the shore fifty feet from the water. She lay with her head to the north and had only a slight list to port. Her looks aloft told us the story as we came to a halt. Her sails had been furled and stowed as if the work had been done in a gale. None had blown away, but all were rotting on the yards. As we stood looking up a gust of wind brought a cloud of black dust down in our faces. Here and there a loose rope was swinging about like a serpent suspended by the tail to a limb, but the rigging as a whole was in fair shape—that is, it seemed to be—but later on we found every rope ready to part at the slightest pull.

We had come upon her broadside. One of the men walked down to her stern and stared and blinked for five minutes before he could trace the faded letters and make out "Emily Benson, St. John's, N. F." She wasn't a Russian, but a Newfoundland whaler and sealer. Not a boat was in sight on her davits, while her rudder had been carried away and several planks above it crushed in. Night fell as we stood there, and it was decided to put up our tent instead of going aboard. No one had even looked over her rail yet. The mate had affirmed that nothing grewsome could be found aboard, but he had no relish for making an inspection by candlelight. I doubt if any man in our party slept for more than an hour at a time that night. Our tent was pitched within five feet of the vessel, and while the air was perfectly still the cold was intense, the thermometer showing 23 degrees below zero. Now and then the ice in the bay would crack like the report of a blunderbuss, while the frost penetrated the planks of the derelict and produced strange and uncanny noises. I remembered that I, for one, was glad indeed when daylight came again.

The brig stood so high that we had to board her by clambering up the fore chains. We had pictured her deck a scene of desolation, but we were agreeably disappointed. There was some little disarray, but no such disorder as might have been expected. The cabin doors were shut, the hatches on the slide drawn over the fo'castle. Her try works were still standing, and the big kettle in which the blubber was melted was half full of a substance which had once been oil. The scuttle butt or cask holding drinking water was simply a heap of rotten staves, and the same was true of the beef barrel. Here and there were rotten spots in her deck planks, and the fo'castle deck was almost hidden from sight by the growth of fungus. Had the eight of us grouped together in any one spot our united weight would have broken the deck beams, and had we swarmed on the rigging we could have loosened all the chain plates and perhaps brought down all the yards and the topgallant masts on deck. Our first move was to enter the cabin. The doors were readily opened, but we had to stand aside for ten minutes on account of the unpleasant odor of what is known as dry rot, and a breath of it choked the lungs like smoke.

The skylight and windows had been closed and sealed, and the cabin was as dark as a prison solitary. We got a couple of candles from our stock to light the way, and in the course of half an hour we had seen everything there was to be seen. The brig's log told us everything. It was lying open on the table in the cabin, and beside it were a pen and an ink bottle. Twenty years previously the whaler had been driven into the bay during a gale. She rode out the storm safely enough, but winter caught her there and held her fast. Very early in the season a storm from the west drove a great mass of ice into the bay, and such was the pressure that the brig was lifted up and carried ashore. When spring came, the crew of the Benson set out in their boats in search of rescue. But driving gale or grinding ice must have brought death to the last one. Deserted by her crew and as lonely an object as man ever saw, the whaler lay there on the rocks doomed to slow decay. She stood too high for the bears and foxes to get aboard, and if any wandering native had set foot on her decks he had taken nothing

CLYDE GILDOW KILLED

Young Man Who Was Well Known in Newark,
Where He Formerly Lived, Was Cut in Two
By a Train at Zanesville.

Clyde Gildow, 24 years old, who some time ago lived in Newark when he was brakeman on the B. & O. railroad, met a tragic death at Zanesville Saturday. The young man's body was cut completely in two across the waist in the Zanesville B. & O. yard. The parts of the severed body were found 15 feet from each other by B. & O. brakeman J. W. Breslin.

Mr. Breslin notified Coroner Matthews and the police department.

The portions of the body when found, were lying in pools of blood. The body was severed across the waist, the left arm was cut off at the shoulder, and the head and face were scratched and bruised. Parts of the clothing were torn into shreds.

Four dollars in money and a watch were found on Gildow's clothing. The time piece had stopped at 1:38 o'clock and this leads to the supposition that he had been struck by B. & O. east bound passenger train No. 106.

Gildow had his monthly pay check, representing $55 cashed Friday and it is known that he had been drinking Friday night. He parted company with a fellow employe at about nine o'clock. He was later seen, it is said, in an intoxicated condition about the B. & O. depot.

A theory advanced was that he had boarded the train and had fallen off. This, however, is generally discredited as is also the one that he had been robbed and had met with foul play.

All of the money which he had drawn Friday has not been accounted for. He paid accounts and purchased clothing, amounting in all to about $25. This would have left a balance of $30 and only $4 was found on his person.

Whether he spent the balance Friday evening is not known although he was very generous disposition and could have disposed of that amount.

At the time when Gildow met his death it is supposed that he was groping his way through the railway yards to his boarding house.

Mr. Gildow went to Zanesville to work for the Central Union company about two years ago from Newark where he had been employed by the B. & O. He was an excellent workman and very popular with his superiors and fellow employes. He made his home in Zanesville with Joseph Lowe, an uncle.

He was born at Quaker City, Ohio, where the remains will be taken for burial. His father, Joshua Gildow, lives in Waynesburg, Pa. His mother is dead. One brother, Martin O. Gildow, lives at Newark. Mesdames Charles Hayes of Barnesville and Willis Greist of Waynesburg, Pa., are surviving sisters.

The brother arrived in Zanesville Saturday to take charge of the remains.

The decedents fellow employes were engaged Saturday in designing a very handsome floral tribute. At either end of a plank three feet long, miniature telephone poles had been erected. This was strung with wires, one of the wires being broken. The design was covered with flowers of different hues.

Coroner Matthews will hold an inquest Tuesday.

The engineer on B. & O. 106, when seen by the coroner, stated that he did not see a man on the track at the spot where Gildow was killed. This leads to the belief that Gildow was aboard the train and had fallen between the cars.

Soil is a Living Organism.
Formerly the soil was regarded as mineral matter, simply decayed rock mixed with dead organic matter, says an exchange. Now we know that the soil is a living organism whose life is as important as that of the animal or the plant itself. If the soil be killed, it is absolutely sterile. In other words, if the life of organisms which make soil fertile are destroyed the soil is incapable of producing a crop. Plants, as a rule, eat only mineral food, such as phosphoric acid, potash and nitric acid, but animals usually eat only organic foods, such as fats, sugars and protein matter.

A TRUE HERO.

One of the Kind That Gets Little Recognition Here Below.

Did you ever know a hero real well? I know at least one and quite intimately. Who? I am afraid you would hardly recognize his name, and besides it would not be just right to give it here. He is only an old bachelor who works in a shop. He has been at one bench for something like—well, from this you may judge: When he began, he was fresh from school. He lives in a little frame house, with an absurd little back yard hardly more than big enough for the syringa bush and the ash barrel.

"The first morning I started for the shop," he once told me, "I cut across the back yard and climbed the fence I have been doing it ever since, and it has been a long time." In the tiny lawn is worn a deep footpath. The top rail of the back fence is smoothly polished. His feet wore the path. His hands polished the rail. And all these years he has worked at the same bench, doing the same work.

Not that he lacks intelligence or that he never had an ambition. Intelligence he most certainly has, no mean lore of books and a wide, generous grasp of affairs and the drift of things. Ambition he had, too, but that was before his feet had worn a path across the back yard. I am quite sure that he once loved. In fact, I suspect that I know the one he loved, and that she loved him. But he never married. She did, though she has been widowed for a dozen years.

But why, you ask, with intelligence and ambition, did he stick to his bench? In an upper room of his little cottage is a window blind which is never opened. Behind that blind, peering out through the slits with unrecognizing gaze, sits one who bears the outward form of manhood, yet lacks manhood's mental qualities. The one behind the blind is his brother. Downstairs, pattering feebly about and speaking only in high, thin, querulous tones, is a man and bent old woman—his mother. For the sake of these two he has worn the path in the lawn; for them he put away ambition; for them he stifled the love that once stirred within him.

He is past middle age now, thin as to hair, stooped as to shoulders. Yet is there a tenderness in his voice, a patient sweetness in his smile, a patient resignation in his pale blue eyes, that make his manner of such mild gentleness as you might expect in a saint. From him comes never a word of complaint; about him is no trace of disappointment, no hint of bitterness.

And so, though few know his name, though he wears no glittering gauds, though he goes his way unhampered by pomp or circumstance and all unrecognized by church or state, I cannot help but count him one of earth's true heroes. Don't you?—Sewell Ford in Brandur Magazine.

March of Refinement.
"Now that I think of it," remarked the passenger with the skullcap, "there used to be a little place on this line they called Kiss Station, but it must be something else now. I haven't heard the conductor call it out."

"We're pretty close to it, I think," replied the passenger with the goatee. "But it isn't Kiss Station any more. They've changed the name, but retained the idea. It's now—"

"Happy Junction!" bawled out the conductor as the train slackened its speed for the next stop.—Chicago Tribune.

Her New Jacket.
A naval officer engaged in ordnance duty on a home station was given to talking in his sleep. One night he awakened his wife by starting up in bed and exclaiming in accents of plying distress:

"She must have a new jacket! I must manage to get one for her!"

The wife, knowing her husband's slumbers had never before been disturbed by the requirements of her wardrobe, became vastly agitated and gripped him by the arm.

"William! William!" she breathed earnestly into his ear, hope meanwhile rising high in her breast. "Who is she?"

WARREN'S ADDRESS

By John Pierpont

TAND! the ground's your own, my brave!
Will ye give it up to slaves?
Will ye look for greener graves?
Hope ye mercy still?
What's the mercy despoils feel?
Hear it in that battle-peal!
Read it on your bristling steel!
Ask it—ye who will.

Fear ye foes who kill for hire?
Will ye to your homes retire?
Look behind you! they're afloat!
And, before you see
Who have done it—From the vale
On they come!—and will ye quail?
Lead on rain and iron hail!
Let their welcome be!

In the God of battles trust!
Die we may—and die we must;
But, O where can dust to dust
Be consigned so well,
As where Heaven its dew shall shed
On the martyred patriot's bed,
And the rocks shall raise their head,
Of his deeds to tell!

NEW WELL

Drilled in by the Logan Natural Gas Company on the Miller Farm in Knox County.

Mt. Vernon, O., Oct. 13.—The Logan Natural Gas company drilled in a new well on the Hilliard farm, just across from the Dana Miller farm, south of town, Friday. The well is reported to be quite strong and the results give much satisfaction in the field. The Miller farm, which is under lease to the Ohio Fuel Supply company, contains several producing wells.

Heavy Weights There.

(Lancaster Eagle.)
County Auditor F. L. Mauger and Superintendent George Trimble of the Natural Gas Works, attended a clam bake of the Rownd Island club at the Licking reservoir Thursday and report an excellent time.

The club comprises the best citizens of Newark and surrounding country and each year they wind up the fishing and summer with a big feast.

One of the features of Thursday's event was the presence of seven members whose aggregate weight was 2180 pounds, an average of over 311 pounds.

LETTER

Which Bore No Address at All Was Delivered to the Right Person At Delaware.

Delaware, O., Oct. 13.—The incident which is related of Secretary Shaw, then Governor of Iowa, of addressing a letter to "The Best Woman in Iowa," and the missive being delivered to Mrs. Shaw, has been outdone here. C. D. Young of this city, received a letter from his wife, who is in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, which was not addressed at all. In the former case the mail clerks and postoffice officials had the executive letter head to guide them in delivering the letter, and in this instance the return address of Mr. Young was fortunately in the corner of the envelope.

Another striking example of the accuracy of the mail service was given in this city a few days ago, when a letter addressed to "The Man Who Sold Wood to Mr. Smith. Near the Cemetery," reached its proper destination.

GREEN'S RAZOR

Thrown Away by One of These Girls Arrested at Columbus, but it Was Recovered.

(Columbus Press.)

Two young girls giving the names of Edna DeMar and Pauline Thompson were arrested Saturday night by Patrolman Harbin and were held at the city prison on the charge of loitering.

The girls were found at a saloon at the corner of Pearl and Main streets, where they were raising a disturbance. The arresting officer reported that the Thompson girl was standing on the street and swearing like a sailor.

When searched by Matron Brehm, Edna DeMar had a razor concealed in her stocking. The girl threw it away, but it was later found. The razor has the name of A. W. Green, Newark, O., engraved on the handle.

It is claimed that the DeMar girl is a companion of Jesse Johnson, who was arrested for pocket picking about 10 days ago.

AMUSEMENTS.

Lovers of intelligent humor who witness Julie Walters' comedy, "Side-Track," on its production at the Auditorium tonight, will no doubt enjoy the amusing incidents that befall the tramp. No expense has been spared to make each scene of this play a series of funny stage pictures. All scenery for each act is carried by the company. Several good specialties are introduced. The play is virtually new, having been rewritten by Miss Louise Llewellyn. The piece has many imitators but not any have reached the high standard of "Side-Track" which has become a household word.

A Family Appraisalment.
Mr. Spriggins pines himself on understanding the value of money.
"And that's where Mr. Spriggins makes a mistake," said the liberal man. "He expects a dollar to buy two or three times as much as it has any right to and is continually being annoyed and disappointed."—Washington Star.

Fatal to His Candidacy.
"You have just as much right and theoretically just as good a chance as anybody else to be president," says the patriotic citizen to his neighbor.
"I cannot agree with you," sighs the neighbor. "We have no children, and that fact alone would lose me the photographers' vote."—Judge.

A Corner in Eggs.
"That old hen just seems to be bursting with pride," remarked the farmer's dog.
"Pride? Nothing of the sort. It's eggs," replied the Leghorn rooster. "She thinks she's a financier, and she's trying to stop laying until there's a rise in price."—Exchange.

FUEL MAKING SCHEMES

Many Novel Applications at the Patent Office.

JERSEY INVENTOR'S UNIQUE IDEA

Relative of Thomas Edison Proposes to Substitute Grass For Coal—Fort Worth (Tex.) Man Has a Prescription For Compounding Fuel—Device For Condensing Peat.

Patent officials have heretofore paid but little attention to schemes for manufacturing substitutes for coal, says a special dispatch from Washington to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. There have been many devices and formulas for products that would serve as a fuel substitute, but in most cases they have been worthless, costing more than the average coal. With anthracite at over $20 a ton, soft coal scarce and advancing in price and wood on the boom in the fuel market, there has been a throng of inventors at the patent office with applications for patents on all sorts of artificial fuel. There has also been a rush of inventors with plans for converting grates and burners so that they may be adapted for fuel oil and liquid substitutes. Out of the plans offered it is the hope of the patent officials that some scheme may be found which will serve as a substitute for anthracite coal and remove the people from the nightmare of a coal famine for the coming winter.

A relative of Thomas Edison, the famous electrical expert, is in the field with what is probably the most unique scheme to rid the public of the burdens of the long coal strike. If his plan should be found practical, every housewife will be able to go out into the front yard each morning and gather the chief component of the Edison substitute for coal. This is nothing more nor less than grass. The inventor is Simon Ogden Edison of East Orange, N. J. He promises to convert the natural or dried fiber of all kinds of grasses, grain, corn, sugar cane, etc., into artificial fuel. He has obtained a patent on the process for treating such materials by which he claims to be able to produce a smoldering flame similar to that resulting from burning coal instead of a blaze caused by the ignition and consumption of wood.

E. J. Mead of Philadelphia has a patent on a plan to make a combustible briquet from comminuted coal, coke or other burnable material by the use of molasses as a binding agent. Molasses has been employed for this purpose before, but there are certain objections to it, one of which is that it will usually disintegrate on coming in contact with water or moisture. Mead's process avoids this result by heating the molasses when used as a bind. Another scheme is for making a poor quality of soft coal available as a high grade fuel. A Denver man has invented a process which requires considerable machinery for removing the water, volatile hydrocarbons and ammonia from the lignite, leaving a pitchy material, which is pressed into briquets.

A Baltimore man has a plan for using sawdust in a compressed brick form suitable for stoves and grates. A prescription for compounding fuel has been drawn up by a resident of Fort Worth, Tex., and he claims the product is superior to the best grade of bituminous coal and at the same time is far cheaper. In addition to all these advantages, he calls attention to the fact that it possessed the highly desirable quality of being nonexplosive.

A great many schemes of artificial fuel call for the use of peat as one of the parts of the compound. A British subject by the name of Gilliam has just taken out letters patent on a device for drying and condensing peat for fuel. His scheme is something like that of the Fort Worth man, consisting of a mixture of a lot of ingredients to produce a substitute for anthracite. Of the material he employs the principal is peat, mixed with which is the oxide of an alkaline earth, finely divided carbon, sugar and an alkali salt. This is pressed into blocks and sold in that shape.

A Chicago man has a process for converting earth or soil into fuel by adding to such disintegrated material certain quantities of pitch and resin, sawdust, sulphuric acid and hot water. Another scheme is to heat coal dust to the point of ignition and afterward mix it with paraffin, resin, borax, ammonium, acetic acid, oil cake meal and crude potash. Still another recipe for making artificial fuel is an admixture of the following: Resin, tallow, sal soda, alum, cider vinegar, flour paste, coal dust and sawdust.

HIT BY TRAIN

Charles VanDorn Was Instantly Killed Near Pataskala Saturday Night--Deceased was Brother of Richard VanDorn of This City.

Pataskala, O., Oct. 13.—Charles VanDorn, who several years ago conducted a livery stable at Pataskala, and whose wife is a sister of James Williams of Newark, was killed by Baltimore & Ohio train No. 112 Saturday evening, about 6:43 o'clock. This is Conductor Taylor Spence's train that passes through Pataskala at that hour.

The engineer of the train thought he struck some object about a mile and a half east of Pataskala, but in the darkness he could distinguish nothing. When the train reached Zanesville the engineer in stepping in front of the locomotive saw blood on the pilot. Convinced then that the object he had hit near Pataskala was a human being the engineer sent a telegram to the agent here to that effect.

A party went down the track to the point designated by the engineer in his dispatch and found Mr. VanDorn's body which had been thrown about 60 feet from the rail. Death had been instantaneous. Whether the unfortunate man had been sitting on the ties or walking on or across the track is not known.

The deceased who was a brother of Richard VanDorn telegraph operator of Newark, was about 48 years old. His wife and three children live in Pataskala, but for some time Mr. VanDorn has been staying at the home of his brother, Brainard, who lives two miles east of the village.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

In the Field of Sport.

Denison University's foot ball team under Coach Stanton, went to Delaware Saturday, and as was predicted by the Advocate went up against the hardest proposition they have had yet, or will have this season. Coach Boyle's Ohio Wesleyan team out classed the Denison boys, and beat them by the decisive score of 29 to 6.

The Methodists played a game which times showed class and at others was miserable foot ball, but their errors were not those of system of play, or weakness of offense or defense. They fumbled badly but this fault can, and will be rectified, and Boyle's men will give Fauser's Oberlin proteges a hot argument next Saturday, at Oberlin. The latter team beat Wittenberg 40 to 0, and Denison is easily 18 points better than the Springfield team. O. W. U. defeated Denison 29 to 6, and Denison can beat Wittenberg at least 18 to 0, so that on dope, O. W. U. stands at least an equal chance to beat Oberlin. The game between these two colleges is generally looked upon as one for the State Championship.

Ohio State is Coming.

Ohio State University defeated West Virginia university on a muddy field at Columbus Saturday by score of 39 to 0, which shows about the relative merits of the two teams. The showing of the State university boys was such as to encourage Coach Perry Hale who has done great work with the material at hand, under discouraging circumstances.

The Ohio Medical University sent a big delegation to the game, accompanied by their band, and showed their good feeling by enthusiastic rooting for the Ohio State boys.

TRIVIAL, YET POTENT.

The Tyranny of the Small and the Helplessness of Mankind.
The "tyranny of littleness" is the cruel despotism not of one master, but of a multitude of small ones. Witness the ironclad sway which any sovereign ruler of the kitchen may wield over a helpless household. What happiness or misery is bestowed lightly by one who turns a toaster or brews a pot of coffee?

We are all slaves to milliners and tailors. The milliner holds us helpless in his clutches. The chore man orders us about. The maid of all work beckons, and we follow. We bow and scrape before the haughty plumber.

We who would strike down monarchs and measure swords with ministers of finance, what sorry figures we cut in the community if slighted by the laundress! We scarce can hold our own against a surly railway porter, and it is but by the courtesy of Master Boots that we emerge from our hotel apartment. And who shall stand before the overwhelming power vested in an offended waiter? We cannot even mount a trolley car if the conductor and motorman choose to ignore us.

The man who rules the Stock Exchange cannot rest at night because an infant's voice banishes dreams. He is a victim to the insect world. Who will abolish the tyranny of flies and mosquitoes?

Behold the tyranny of horses, dogs and cats, to which the great majority of mortals submit without a murmur. What master is as exacting as a tight shoe or a torturing collar? A parrot or a pet canary can sally trey men's souls! Yes, "things are in the saddle team went to Cleveland Saturday and sprang a surprise by beating Case scientific school 17 to 0. Case a week before had scored on Michigan a feat that had not been accomplished since 1900, and they were confident of winning, but Eckstorm's doctors played fast: aggressive foot ball and literally carried the Science boys off their feet. Davidson of Case, who made the touch down against Michigan, and Francis, O. M. U.'s full back were put out of the game for slugging.

Games Elsewhere.

The foot ball games elsewhere resulted as follows Saturday:

Michigan 60—Indiana, 0.
Yale 5—Brown, 0.
Harvard 22—Maine, 0.
Princeton 11—Naval Cadets, 0.
Cornell 57—Williams, 6.
Columbia 5—Buffalo, 0.
Pennsylvania 11—Swarthmore, 6.
Iowa 12—Drake, 0.
Illinois 44—Washington, 0.
West Point 11—Dickinson, 0.
Bucknell 18—Carlisle Indians, 0.
Notre Dame 23—Beiot, 0.
Northwestern 11—Rush Medics, 0.
Oberlin 40—Wittenberg, 0.
Wisconsin 52—Lawrence, 0.

All the leading western teams won their games Saturday and kept their goal lines from being crossed and with the exception of Pennsylvania and Cornell the same may be said of the eastern teams.

Michigan according to experts did not play the game of which they are capable Saturday but at that they scored 60 points making their total to date, 315, while 6 points have been scored against them.

and ride mankind."

Who will do justice to the tyranny of the depraved inanimate taskmasters? A diamond necklace changes the history of empires. A courtier's cloak may pave the way to royal favor. A glove, a handkerchief, a glass slipper, what things to conjure with! Slaves of the lamp! Slaves of the ring! Ah, the supremacy of trivial things, that one real tyranny to which we all bow down! Is there no hope that we may some day throw off the heavy yoke? Well is it for us to meditate upon this vital problem which touches each so closely. And as we meditate we may grow wise enough to break some of the multitudinous shackles that hold us spiritless and helpless in the power of the arch tyrant, "Little Things."—Caroline Ticknor in Braceur Magazine.

On the Steps of the Scaffold

(Original.)

It was moonset, a blood red crescent sinking into a band of yellow just over the roofs of London. The day had been a holiday, for King Henry VIII. had divorced his queen, Anne Boleyn, not by process of law, but by the act. And now from many a chimney smoke rose on the still air while housewives beneath were preparing the evening meal. All London had attended the execution, and all London was hungry.

The young Earl of Emberton, who since childhood had been in France, had just returned and was passing over Tower hill. Before him against the yellow strip loomed the silhouette of the scaffold, the sinking moon at the moment standing above it, its lower horn seeming to rest upon the block where that day had been bowed the head of the young queen.

"Singular," muttered the earl, "that the red crescent should be in that position."

As he drew near the scaffold he heard a low moan and then noticed for the first time, seated on the lowest step, a woman, her head bent to her knees, her face buried in her hands.

"Madam," he said, greatly surprised, "I marvel to find you in this gruesome place at such an hour. How came you here?"

The woman raised her head, and Emberton saw that she was young and comely. She was not weeping, yet on her face was a strange distress. Her costume was rich, denoting that she was of high degree, her robe being of silk, though without any adornment whatever. Around her neck was a broad black velvet band, but even from this no jewel or trinket was suspended.

"Oh, sir," she said, "take me away! I was here with the crowd today, and when it was over all went to their homes but I. It was cruel to leave me here alone."

"But your menials? If your friends deserted you, surely those dependent upon your bounty?"

"They all went together, and I, dazed by the multitude, the solemn words of the man of God, the grim figure of the execution, the glitter of the ax in the sun, must have fallen into a swoon, for I have only just now come to consciousness."

"I cannot imagine," said the earl, perplexed, "how your friends and servants could have been so brutal."

"Brutal! Can you expect tenderness from a people whose king's divorces are written in blood?"

"Come away," said the young man. "You are trembling; you are faint. Your mind must be diverted at once from this bitter experience."

"Where shall I go?" she asked, fixing despairing eyes upon him.

"To your people."

"Oh, my people!" she said, a wail in her voice. "Do you think that they would welcome me after what occurred today?"

"Then you must come with me," said the earl. "To stay here another hour would drive you to a madhouse."

In Emberton's heart suddenly, without requiring time to develop, there was born a great love for this desolate being who had passed through so strange an ordeal. Since she did not move he sat down beside her. A chill wind made her shiver, and he folded his cloak around her, leaving his arms about the cloak. His eyes fell upon the band at her neck, and as his hand rested upon her shoulder he took the ribbon in his fingers and moved it just so far that in the dim light he saw what he thought was a fine red line. She drew his hand away. Her was as cold as ice.

"Go with me," he pleaded. "You are cold and desolate. I will warm your heart with mine. I will make you forget this dreadful place. I will take you to sunny France. This dreary town is not fit for one so delicate, so sensitive. In France there are no troubles. The court and the nobles live in bright Paris, with its gardens, while the peasants tread the purple grapes in the vine vats, singing gaily. I came from there only today. We will go back together."

She turned her eyes upon him, and seemed to drink in every word. He fancied a color coming into the pale cheek; that the icy hand he held in his was less cold.

"I will go with you," she said, "and love you forever, but first let me take one last look at the block."

"No, no," he cried; "no more of death! Come rather into life." Despite his pleadings she moved up the steps, looking back at him wistfully. He held her hand, but it seemed to slip from his as if it were unreal. He caught at her robe, but it was fluttering in the wind and eluded his grasp.

"Listen," she said, pausing. It seemed that he could hear a low murmuring of many voices. Then all was still.

She moved on, mounting each step heavily, as if weighted with lead, till she had reached the platform. Then, waving her hand to him as if in adieu, she knelt and placed her head upon the block.

Emberton fancied he heard something moving swiftly through the air, a thud as of steel entering wood.

The next morning at daylight as the watch moved across Tower hill he discovered the Earl of Emberton lying in a stupor at the foot of the scaffold. It was taken to his home, where he lay for months with a diseased brain, and when his reason returned he left London forever. Even in his beloved France he found neither health nor happiness. No one save a menial was ever admitted to his bedroom, and after his death a portrait was discovered above his mantle—the sovereign's beheaded queen, Anne Boleyn.

REUNION

Of the Family, the First Held in Thirty Years at the Mehr Home Sunday.

Mr. Charles T. Mehr, mechanist and engineer in charge of the stationary engines at the Southern Pacific Railroad at Houston, Texas, who is here on a visit to his mother the venerable German-American citizen, Mrs. Louise Mehr, widow of the late Frank Mehr, of 266 North Fourth street, was entertained by his mother at the first family reunion in thirty years. Mr. Mehr, who learned his trade at the old Blandy shops in this city, started out to make his own way in the world thirty years ago, and for many years the family lost track of him. He was here for a few days stay about twenty-three years ago, but this is his first visit since.

At the old family home Sunday the entire family met at the table. They were: Mrs. Louisa Mehr, Mrs. Lizzie Coulter, Mrs. Katie Davidson, Miss Alma Coulter, Mr. Charles Coulter, Mr. Eli Davidson, Master Lester Harold, George and Carl Davidson and Master Frank Coulter of Columbus, O. Mr. Charles F. Mehr and son, Dorsey, of Houston, Texas, Miss Carrie Mehr and Mr. John Mehr of this city. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Cliff H. Rosebraugh, Miss Lucile Berry of Columbus, and Mrs. Lyton. A splendid dinner such as grandma Mehr only can prepare was discussed by all with pleasure.

His Case Not So Bad After All.
"Ah, it's a sad old world," sighed the man who had been cheated out of $20.
"Yes," assented his neighbor. "One of my horses got his head fast in the harness last night and broke his neck. I was offered $200 for him less than a month ago."

"Pshaw! That's too bad. Looks as though it was going to bracken up, doesn't it?" And he went on his way whistling cheerfully.—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Revenge.

M. Colombes, a merchant of Paris, had his revenge on a former sweetheart, a lady of Rome, when he left her by will a legacy of $50,000 for having some twenty years before refused to marry him, "through which," states the will, "I was enabled to live independently and happily as a bachelor."

Strangers Now.

"You ought to see the lovely letters my husband writes," said the bride of a month to one of her girl friends.
"Oh, I've seen a few," rejoined the dear girl friend. "In fact, I've got nearly a trunkful of them in the attic."—Exchange.

CHILDREN WILL ATTEND THE POWERS LECTURE.

Adults Will Hear the Lecture on "The Other Half" in the Evening—A Library Benefit.

More than two thousand school children from the various grades of the Newark public schools below the High school, will assemble at the Auditorium Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 14th to hear Mr. C. Oliver Powers' illustrated lecture "The Other Half," which will be repeated in the evening for adults.

These lectures Tuesday afternoon and night will be given for the benefit of the high school library. Tickets were distributed among the school children and each child who sells one ticket is entitled to free admission at the matinee. Others may procure tickets for the matinee at ten cents each. Many children have sold more than one ticket thus providing free admission for others who were less fortunate. Supt. Townsend estimates that over 2000 children will attend the matinee thus assuring the largest gathering of school children ever seen at the Auditorium. It will be worth the time to see the children march to the Auditorium. Their arrival at the Auditorium will be timed as follows:

3 p. m.—Texas, Franklin and Wool-side.

3:05 p. m.—West End.

3:10 p. m.—Mill Street and East Main.

3:15 p. m.—South Third and South Fifth.

3:20 p. m.—North Third and North Fourth.

3:25 p. m.—Central.

The High school students will attend the evening lecture.

Mr. Powers is one of the most noted lecturers on the public platform and the moving pictures to be seen with his "Other Half" lecture add greatly to the interest in the subject.

The lecture will be well worth the price and those who patronize it will be helping a worthy institution—the High School Library.

APPOINTMENT—S. S. Brown has been appointed administrator of the estate of George E. Johnson, deceased, of Newark township.

Col. Edw. Butler, charged with bribery, goes on trial at St. Louis this afternoon.

Writing of a Snake Story.

The mother of a two-year-old boy of Nashville, Ind., found the baby playing with a snake the other day. When the reptile was driven away, it carried with it a ring which it had taken from the child's finger. This is recorded to preserve the truth. A few years hence the story will get around that the snake stole the baby and carefully deposited the ring in the mother's hand as a keepsake.—Buffalo Express.

A News Item.

Mrs. Brown—Have you heard about Mr. Jones? It's perfectly awful! He came home drunk one night last week, and when his wife remonstrated with him he called her an old hen, and she cried and said she was going home to her mother, but she hasn't gone yet.

Mrs. Smith told me all about it. What an awful gossip that woman is! I'm glad I'm not like her.—New York Journal.

FELIX HARRIS

Former County Commissioner Died Monday Morning at His Home Near Utica.

Mr. Felix C. Harris, whose serious illness was noticed in Saturday's Advocate, died at his country home, three miles east of Utica, at six o'clock a. m. Monday. His heart was involved, and heart failure was the immediate cause of his death. He leaves a widow and a large family of children and grandchildren. His first wife died several years ago.

Mr. Harris served two terms as County Commissioner of Licking county with credit to himself and benefit to the public. He was a genial whole-souled public spirited man, with hosts of friends.

"Bud" Vance Badly Hurt Monday Afternoon at Fleek & Neel's Grocery

Ralph Vance, better known as "Bud" Vance, son of Mrs. J. B. Vance of 193 North 10th street, met with a painful accident about 2:15 this afternoon. Vance started to work at the Fleek & Neel grocery only this morning, and was going down on the elevator. He slipped and in trying to save himself caught the wrong rope and the elevator ascended. His left leg was caught between the elevator and the second floor and the leg was badly crushed between the knee and hip.

He was soon taken from his perilous position, and Dr. Hatch was summoned, who made a superficial examination. As far as could be told the leg is not broken, although examination will have to be made to determine the extent of the injury.

Vance seems to be singularly unlucky. Two weeks ago while playing football he was hurt in a scrimmage and for 36 hours was unconscious.

Several years ago while boxing with a companion he received a blow on the head which for several days appeared to be a fatal injury.

CHAMP CLARK STORIES

Why Congress Is Largely Made Up of Lawyers.

American People Have an Admiration For Orators—Judge Porter and the Jury—An Able Man at Table—Congress as a Presidential Hatchery. Telling Stories on the Stump—How a Buck Was Vanquished—Patriotic Under All Circumstances.

[Copyright, 1902, by Champ Clark.]
Frequently the fact is referred to in the newspapers that a large majority of representatives and senators are lawyers. That is true and probably will continue to be true so long as the republic lives. It grows out of these facts:

First—The American people are the greatest admirers of oratory on the face of the earth. All lawyers are not orators, nor do all lawyers get to congress, but their business compels most lawyers to become at least intelligible speakers. No other class of our citizens is so much given to public speaking as lawyers save preachers, and very few of the latter aspire to public station; hence the lawyers have the call, or, in race horse parlance, the pole, when it comes to "running for congress."

Second—A large acquaintance among the people of a congressional district is usually a sine qua non to a nomination or an election. Of course there are exceptions to the rule, but nevertheless that is the rule. A lawyer in active practice has a fine opportunity to know and be known by the voters. Especially was that true when "riding the circuit" was fashionable, for, strange to say, the railroads, instead of increasing the habit of practicing over the circuit, have diminished it. Wherefore? Let philosophers answer.

Third—People have an idea that a man who has spent a large portion of his life studying, practicing and expounding the law ought to know how to make law. This may or may not be true.

As the house is made up largely of lawyers, it goes without saying that courts, judges, lawyers, juries, clients, witnesses et id genus omne are most frequently the themes at the cloakroom séances.

Judge Porter and the Jury.

I do not remember, however, to have heard any lawyer congressman tell a more piquant story about a court than this one I am about to set forth, related by James Kelly Pool of Centralia, Md., who is not a lawyer. He is an editor. He tells it of Hon. Gilchrist Porter, a splendid Christian gentleman who served two terms in congress and several terms on the circuit bench. Pool's story runs in this wise: "It is said that on a certain occasion a sheriff of Audrain county summoned a special jury to try some case in the circuit court at Mexico and for some reason got together a tough lot of Mexico saloon frequenters. After the jury was duly examined it was suggested to the judge that he proceed to qualify the jury. Judge Porter arose from one of his famous 'bench naps,' looked the jury over carefully and said to the jurymen, 'Gentlemen, I can swear you in, but all creation cannot qualify you!'"

It will not be improper to state that Mr. Pool is an ardent temperance advocate.

Judge Porter's Mot.

Judge Porter not only slept a great deal, but he was an enormous eater. No man since the days of Old Epicurus more thoroughly enjoyed dining. Judge Porter was the author of this mot: "A turkey is too much for one man to eat and not enough for two." That is a most remarkable statement when it is remembered that in his circuit bronze turkey gobblers frequently weigh from 40 to 50 pounds. He would have been a fit table companion for the Emperor Maximilian or that more famous Emperor Charles V. whose favorite diet even when an invalid in his old age was lampreys and eel pies.

As to Presidential Hatcheries.

Senator S. B. Elkins of West Virginia once remarked that "the house is a much better hatchery for presidents than the senate." That remark is entirely too sweeping. No senator while in service was ever elected to the presidency and only one representative while in service, James A. Garfield, who was also a senator elect. Everybody regards the vice presidency as a sort of presidential graveyard. Nobody ever seems to think of the speaker's office of the house in that light, and yet only one ex-speaker, James K. Polk, ever reached the presidency. While Vice Presidents John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, Martin Van Buren, John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, Andrew Johnson, Chester A. Arthur and Theodore Roosevelt all attained to that exalted honor, the first three by election and the last five through the death of their chiefs. So that, on the doctrine of chances, leaving out the element of death, a vice president has prospects three times as good of becoming chief magistrate of the republic as a speaker has.

While no senator was ever elected president while serving among the conscript fathers, several reached to the first place after quitting the senate—Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson and Benjamin Harrison. Besides Garfield, the only man who had served in the house of representatives and not in the senate to reach the presidency were Madison, Fillmore, Lincoln, Hayes and McKinley unless we count Washington, the elder Adams and Jefferson, who all served in the Continental congress. Neither Taylor, Grant, Cleveland nor Roosevelt served in either branch of congress. J. Q. Adams served 17 years in the house after he was president, and Andrew Johnson served a small portion of the full senatorial term to which he had been elected after he was president. The following presidents had served in both houses prior to reaching the magistracy of the republic: Jackson, Harrison, Tyler, Pierce, Buchanan and Johnson. To this list must be added Monroe, if service in a Continental congress counts.

It may be seriously doubted whether the easy road to the presidency lies through service in either branch of congress or in both branches. The congressional services of Washington, Monroe, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Pierce, Hayes and Lincoln are little to do with their reaching the White House. All the great leaders in the two houses of congress have harbored the presidential bee, and most of them have descended to their graves full of chagrin and bitter thoughts. Of course, the ambitions of Clay, Webster and Calhoun are always harped upon, but there are others—Corwin, Cass, Douglas, Seward, Blaine, Conkling and a host of other choice spirits. What the explanation of this may be it is not possible to state. Perhaps the fact that veteran senators and representatives have too much record is the chief stumbling block in their pathway.

Which Ran?

It goes without saying that the average commercial tourist is a rattling good story teller. Once while lecturing in Louisiana I ran across one of these modern knights of the road at a restaurant in New Orleans. He asked me if I had ever heard much of General Wash Jones of Texas and then proceeded as follows: "Wash was a great character in his own way, possessed of considerable capacity and many oddities. The latter he cultivated for effect. When Ireland was running as the regular Democratic nominee for governor, Wash tackled him as an independent candidate. As a story teller on the stump Ireland was a success, at which game no living man could beat Wash Jones. They held joint discussions all over the state. Ireland began to tell anecdotes at Wash's expense, which the latter returned in such profusion that Ireland grew weary of it and proposed to Wash that they should both quit telling anecdotes. Wash agreed. The next time they discussed the political issues it was Wash's time to lead off, and he began by stating the history of this war of anecdotes and the agreement between himself and Ireland. He then added:

"Fellow citizens, I fully intend hereafter to live up to that agreement, but I reserve to myself the right to tell one—just one—here today. Once upon a time there was a great buck with spreading antlers which was monarch of all he surveyed in a large pasture. He chased everybody that went through his domain, making it decidedly lively for all intruders into his bailiwick. One hot day a man who was in a great hurry was very desirous of going catanaps through the buck's province in order to save time; but, knowing the vicious nature of the brute, he carefully and cautiously reconnoitered before venturing in. He saw the buck lying down on the edge of the pasture about a half mile distant and concluded that he might pass through, thereby making a short cut, without attracting the attention of his buckship, but he was sadly mistaken, for when he was about half through the pasture the buck came at him red eyed, and he ran for a big oak, intending to take refuge in its spreading branches. The buck, however, was too quick for him and was upon him before he could climb the tree. The buck chased him round and round the tree. It was a great race, but the man could turn quicker than the buck. The Bible says the first shall be last and the last shall be first. Finally the man gained a lap on the buck, and instead of being ahead of the enraged animal came up behind him and suddenly grabbed him by the tail. At this unexpected denouement the buck lit out across the pasture as though Old Nick were after him and never stopped to pester the traveler any more. Now, fellow citizens, I submit to you this question: In this anecdote telling which of us two, Ireland or myself, played the buck and which the innocent traveler?"

Genuine Patriotism.

There are many ways of expressing patriotism. Just as there are many men of many minds. Perhaps the line of Horace, "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori," is the expression most frequently quoted. At David City, Neb., July 4, 1901, I heard one of the speakers relate this anecdote, which appears to me to contain the essence of patriotism. "Once upon a time," said he, "a party of Americans were touring the old world. Among other places, they visited the pyramids of Egypt. A boy who was with them grew weary and fell asleep. They thought to have some fun with him, so they surrounded him with grinning skulls and gruesome skeletons. Then all retired from the range of his vision, and one blew a horn in imitation of Gabriel's trumpet. The boy awoke with a start, rubbed his eyes, looked around a moment to get his bearings and then, swinging his cap above his head, shouted: 'Hurrah! Hurrah! It's the morning of the resurrection, and an American is the first man on the ground.' That boy was an American patriot, a fit countryman for George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and old John Adams." That is hardly as elegant as Horace's mot above quoted; but, judging by the way the vast audience clapped and laughed and yelled, it was up to the mark.

A UNIQUE EXHIBITION.

Professional Woman's League's Big Show in New York.

STREET AFTER STREET OF BOOTHS

Fair Sex of Many Nationalities Engaged in Every One of Them in Different Kinds of Work—Object of the Show—How the Police Women Handled a Man.

Under an azure sky, ablaze with row upon row of electric lights, and to the accompaniment of two women's bands, the front row of women's skirts and the laughter and murmur of a great crowd of visitors the woman's exhibition in New York opened its doors to the public the other night in Madison Square Garden.

The women in long coats and tall hats who opened the carriage doors, the women in blue, frowning under their helmets, who ordered the traps into line; the women ticket sellers and the women ticket takers, as well as the six feet and over Amazon policemen who laboriously patrolled their beats within and without the Garden, all had to work hard to handle the crowds that poured in from 8 o'clock all through the evening, says the New York Tribune. The exhibition opened with a boom. It has been a great undertaking for the Professional Woman's league, which needed a clubhouse and has taken this means to get it.

The show during the evening was as brilliant in color and movement as any combination in a kaleidoscope. The center of the Garden is occupied with booths where dolls jostle hair and complexion specialists, groceries, dry goods, canaries and nerve foods elbow one another; where spare Shakers, in black gowns of primly plated stuff and wonderful transparent net caps, take orders for pure wool hand woven garments and sell maple sugar and buttered sweets, and prominent authors dispose of their own works and write their autographs on the fly leaf while the street sweeper waits. There is street after street of these booths—eighty-six in all—in all the colors of the rainbow, and with women, women, women, in every one, selling, making change, smiling, chatting—in short, performing the eternal feminine act in all its changes.

All the evening a crowd stood about the dollhouse, where actresses sold dolls dressed by themselves in imitation of parts they had taken on the stage. A gold staff used by Miss Lillian Russell in "The Little Duchess" and a chair made from one of the eighteenth century pews out of the parish church at Stratford, both of which articles are to be sold by lot, were also attractions.

Around the ellipse which encircles the booths runs the street of all nations. The Japanese booth is one of the largest and handsomest. It represents the exterior of a tea house. France is represented by the interior of a milliner's shop, where during the night a number of girls deftly trimmed and exhibited the newest modes.

America has two booths—one a New England kitchen, the other a southern cotton field. A bit of the sultan's palace is shown in the Turkey booth; Germany displays the interior of a peasant's cottage, where blond haired frau-leins in peasant garb sang and danced. A beautiful exhibit was that of the "First Americans," where Indian basketry, beadwork, pottery, blankets, etc., were sold. Mrs. Dark Cloud and her daughter, Bessie Bright Eyes, two Iroquois Indians; White Fawn, an Abenaki, and Ah-ta-ne-da and Has-tin-nez, two Indians from the great lakes, all in native dress, added to the picturesqueness of this booth. In the Scotchman booth during the evening linen laces were sold by three women dressed as Edinburgh fishwives and wearing the Charlie Stuart, the Black Watch and the MacLean plaids, while a little girl performed on the bagpipes. Ireland showed a lowly cot, with a donkey contentedly nibbling hay in a penlike stable.

The art exhibition occupies over 200 feet of the gallery and includes, besides a large collection of paintings by women artists, large exhibits of miniatures, original designs for bookplates, painted china, etc. "The Flower Maker," by Harriet Campbell Foss, is a center of attraction. This was a prize winner at the Pan-American exposition. A chest, said to have been the property of King James of England and valued at $100,000, is of interest in this department.

Downtown nearly all the space in the great elliptical corridor is given over to a Venetian street, with cafes, restaurants, a shooting gallery and various attractions. The street of all nations was a mass of color the other night. Flags, banners and bunting in every conceivable shape, the emblems of all countries and the emblems of none, were arranged most effectively; banners and streamers floated from every available spot. In the Chinese village was a little group which attracted much attention, two Chinese mothers with their babies, of no distinguishable sex—little yellow nites with big dark eyes.

Downstairs in the Venetian street King Carnival held full sway. Lovely women (so said the press agent) thronged the streets and reclined in the realistic gondolas. Showers of confetti and paper flowers were as frequent as rain showers during the last month. Masks and dominoes were the proper costumes, although ordinary street dresses were not disbarred. The management had requested those not willing to enter into a "spirit of fun" not to visit Venice. So Venice was populous with a merry, laughing carnival crowd. There was a marionette theater, which caused much amusement. There were many other features—a Japanese tea room, a palmist who did a thriving business, a shooting gallery and slot machines. The most interesting feature, however, of the entire exhibit was the work of the police women. Although there were policemen in attendance, two of their fair understudies actually ejected a man from the Garden. He was smoking and when requested to stop denounced. Thereupon two damsels valiantly seized him by the collar and, wildly brandishing their "billys," rushed him to the street. Reports of other ejections were also received, but could not be confirmed.

Y. M. C. A. SECRETARIES.

Type of the Men That Are Sent to Foreign Lands.

The Young Men's Christian associations of the United States and Canada recently increased their force of twenty-five men in foreign lands by seven recruits. G. S. Phelps goes to Koto, Japan, to become general secretary of the Young Men's Christian association; C. V. Hibbard becomes college secretary at Tokyo, Japan, where there are 50,000 students and high school boys; Prof. C. H. Robertson will go to China to work among the literati; Charles W. Harvey will become a general secretary in one of the largest cities of China; F. M. Gilbert will be a student secretary at Lahore; E. C. Carter will be a traveling secretary among the associations in India; J. L. Murray will take the secretaryship at Bangalore. These men are not of the type that the comic papers depict as missionaries in foreign lands. They are all vigorous young men. They are representatives of the best recent graduates of our universities. Phelps was a leader in athletics in the University of Minnesota. Robertson was active in western college athletics and Carter was a prominent lacrosse player at Harvard. The men were popular men while students in their colleges and attained prominence in association work.

These men represent the same type of men as Robert Galley, Princeton's famous football center rush, who is now general secretary of the association at Tientsin, China. They are backed up financially by the associations of the cities and colleges and by individual friends. They go out at the request of the missionaries on the fields to which they go. For the association work in foreign mission lands $50,000 was raised last year, and $80,000 will be used this year. Calls for secretaries have been on file for several years from many student and city centers. These men go out to organize association work on the basis of the best experience of the American associations and to direct both student and commercial native "young men" into the ways of Christian service, which have been found successful as well in the orient as in this country. All expenses of the associations except the salaries of the American secretaries are borne locally. In one city in China $17,000 (Mexican) was given last year by Chinese business men, who are as quick to appreciate the commercial value of moral teachings as are the railroad companies here. There are now in eight mission lands about 200 associations. Nearly half of this number are student associations, some of which are located in leading institutions of higher learning in China, India and Japan.

ELK PLENTIFUL THIS YEAR.

A Washington Homesteader Brought Down One With a Revolver.

A large number of elk are roaming around Humpulps City, and the killing of an elk is almost a daily occurrence, says a special despatch from Hoquiala, Wash., to the Chicago Inter Ocean. Chunks of red meat, remnants left by the hunter, are scattered through the timber, to be had by going after it. The other morning Lewis Loscy and Herbert Newbury started out from the city and returned at night with two pack horses loaded with elk meat.

A homesteader living near Hoquiala, Wash., while on his way to a spring of water encountered a bunch of ten elk the other night. They stood and looked at him in fearless amazement. Having a .45 Colt's revolver with him and being afraid they might attack him, he drew his gun and fired into the band, bringing down an elk that dressed 400 pounds. Around Humpulps is one of the best hunting places in the Pacific northwest.

Jewelry of Coal.

A West Philadelphia man whose sense of humor is abnormally developed has taken advantage of the high price of coal to have an odd lot of jewelry designed for his own use, says the Philadelphia Record. The coal situation doesn't strike many people as a joke, but this West Philadelphia person is one of those who smile at the funerals of their grandmothers. Moreover, he is not a family man, consequently he may be excused if the seriousness of the situation doesn't appeal to him. The other day he took a lump of anthracite to a jeweler and ordered it cut into five small pieces and made into a scarfpin. The order was carried out, and he is now wearing the pin as though it were the most delicate bit of humor in the world. The setting is of eighteen carat gold, and the bits of coal have been cut in the same fashion as diamonds, one large piece being surrounded by four smaller ones.

A Fad of the Hour.

Coral is the fad of the hour, and coral lozette chains are being worn. They can be found in the most coral or in coral beads of various size that range in color from the palest pink to dark red.

BOWSER'S MOTHER-IN-LAW

[Copyright, 1902, by C. L. Lewis.]

AM Mr. Bowser's mother-in-law. There are occasions when he wishes I were not, but that makes no difference to me. He is a son-in-law who needs to be brought to book about once in so often, and I am the person to do it.

When I visit him, I always arrive unannounced, and I never depart until I get good and ready. I reached this house at an early hour this morning, having decided on a month's visit. My arrival was a complete surprise, as I had planned for. I was seated at the breakfast table with my daughter when Mr. Bowser, who had not yet come downstairs, called to her from the upper hall:

"By thunder, but if you have thrown my socks out of the window why don't you come up and throw the rest of my clothes after them!"

We paid no attention to his remarks, and it wasn't two minutes before he shouted down:

"Woman, have you been selling my collars and cuffs to a tramp again? I've hunted for half an hour and can't find one!"

He expected Mrs. Bowser to come rushing upstairs and find his things and say how sorry she was, but she didn't rush. I told her to sit down right where she was and let him whoop, and it wasn't long before he was yelling:

"Do you hear me, down there! I'd like to know whether this is a house or a wigwam! This infernal collar is forty rods too small for me, and I want to know what's the matter!"

Not a word in reply, and ten minutes later we heard him coming down with a tread that shook the whole house. He came stamp, stamp, stamp, and as he reached the dining room door he exploded with:

"Woman, I have called to you three times and got no answer! By the great horn spoon, but—"

"That's enough of that, Mr. Bowser," I said as I pointed my finger at him.

"It's—it's you," he sort of gasped as he recognized me.

"Yes, sir; it is, and now you sit down here and eat your breakfast and keep quiet. It seems to me that you begin the kind. I won't have the muss and the smell of fresh paint around here." He sat down and read the newspaper for a while, and then I saw him sneak down the cellar. I knew he was up to something, and I followed on and said:

"Benjamin, what are you up to down there?"

"I'm going to fix the gas meter," he growled.

"You'll do nothing of the sort. You know as much about gas meters as I do about angels' harps, and I don't propose to be blown up on the first day of my arrival. You let that meter alone or I'll do some talking to you!"

He let it alone and went into the back yard and sat down in the shade. By and by I saw a man open the alley gate and beckon to him, and I also caught sight of a cow in the alley. I waited a few minutes and then went out, and I reached the gate just in time to hear Mr. Bowser say:

"Well, if you'll guarantee her to give twelve quarts of milk a day I'll take her at that price."

"Benjamin, what little trick are you up to now?" I asked as I stepped into the alley.

"I'm buying a cow," he replied as he tried to look me in the face.

"And what do you know about cows? Is it this one horned, slab sided, bob-tailed creature that is going to give twelve quarts of milk a day? Has your wife asked you to buy a cow?"

"Can't I buy a cow without asking her? The doctor says she ought to drink three quarts of fresh milk every day, and I'm going to give her a glad surprise."

"And that's right," said the man who had brought the cow. "He's a husband who loves his wife and wants to keep her out of the grave. There'll be the creamiest kind of milk for the three of you, with plenty left over for the cats."

"There will be no cow around here," I said as I gave the creature a whack and sent her off down the alley. "The doctor is a fraud, this man is a liar, and you, Benjamin, are as big a fool as ever! Come back into the yard and sit down!"

The first thing after luncheon he powwowing around rather early in the morning."

He brushed red and white and then sat down with a jar and looked around on the food with a sneer. I saw that he was going to find fault, and I said: "If you don't fancy what we have for breakfast, you can go to a restaurant. I have heard of your fault finding over your meals, and you'll either stop it or take your board elsewhere."

"Perhaps you imagine you run this house," he said as he bristled up.

"I don't imagine anything about it. I have come here to take charge for a few weeks, and you want to quit prancing around and caviling down. Don't try to bluff me, Benjamin Burton Bowser."

"I didn't ask you to come."

"I know you didn't, and that's the reason I came. I heard you had broken loose again and needed a strong hand. What's the matter with your shirt collar?"

"Mrs. Bowser tied knots in it to spite me."

"The trouble is that you got up and put on your day shirt over your night-shirt, and everything is lurching up around your shoulders. You can dress yourself that way if you want to, but don't make no rows about it. It's early in the morning, but I want to tell you another thing—don't sit there and stare at your wife like a tiger at a lamb. If you feel that you must glare and look like a pirate, try it on me."

I had him pretty well in hand before the meal was over, and when he had finished he sneaked up and made a charge of clothes without a single exception. When he came down, I was waiting about with I think I had a few new ideas.

"I'm going to paint the front steps today," he related.

"You are not going to do anything of proposed to take his wife seven miles into the country on a trolley car to look for blackberries, but I put my foot down on that.

Then he got the notion that one of the bedrooms ought to be repaired, and he was making ready to soak off the old paper with sponge and water when I hustled him out of the room.

Half an hour later I found him down in the kitchen preparing to make a barrel of fall tonic, but I cut his operations short.

At 3 o'clock he sat on the front steps smoking and reading "Fox's Martyrs," but half an hour later I caught sight of him at the back yard gate just as he was closing a bargain for seven hens and a peacock.

At 5 o'clock he would have tried to tune the piano if I hadn't objected, and at 6 he was making ready to overhauled the bells in the house, when I led him down to dinner. He got away from me after dinner long enough to offer a man $100 for the state rights of a new fire escape, but I overhauled him in time to stop the sale. He made a streak at 9 o'clock and had reached the corner and begun to talk about taking stock in a flying machine when I got hold of his arm and walked him home and shut and locked all the doors on him. Amanda and I went upstairs and left him in a fit of sulks, and when I came down at midnight he sat in his chair fast asleep, and the family cat was looking at him in pity and sympathy.

"Benjamin," says I as I laid my hand on his bald head, "it has been a long day for you. You'd better go up to bed."

As I thought I saw tears in his eyes as he looked around and then stumbled upstairs.

FUNERAL

Of Frank Hartshorn Sunday Afternoon Was Attended by a Large Number of Friends.

The funeral of the late Frank E. Hartshorn, who died at his home on the Granville road suddenly on Friday afternoon, after an illness lasting only from the preceding Monday, took place on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. It was one of the largest funerals that has been held in this community for years, and the unusual large attendance was the silent yet high tribute to the character of the departed, and the high respect in which he was held. The procession was nearly a mile in length, and presented an impressive sight. When the cortege reached Granville street it was met by a large procession of the members of Cedar Camp, No. 4727, Modern Woodmen of America, of which the deceased was a member, there being about 200 in line.

The funeral was under the auspices of the Woodmen, and the sermon was preached by Rev. L. C. Sparks, the new pastor of the First M. E. church, of which the deceased was a consistent member. The interment was made in Cedar Hill cemetery.

LECTURE

Given by Dr. Shawan Deserved a Larger Audience—Next Sunday's Speaker—Y. M. C. A. Classes.

The illustrated lecture which Dr. Shawan of Columbus gave in Taylor Hall on Saturday evening merited a much larger audience than was present. He used many beautiful illustrations of former scenes in Europe and his descriptions were both interesting and instructive.

It was an exceedingly helpful address the doctor gave at the Men's meeting in Taylor Hall Sunday afternoon. Taking for his subject "What a Young Man Needs Most," he spoke of those elements essential to success in any man's life:—right habits, faithfulness to duty, courage and lofty ideals.

The association is greatly indebted to Miss Bertha Doomy and Miss Minnie Shephard for the beautiful duet, "Thy Will be Done," which they sang at the opening song service of the meeting.

Next Sunday Mr. Paul C. Martin a brilliant young attorney of Springfield O., will give the address at the Men's meeting. His subject will be, "A Message From the Home of a Roman Emperor."

The Y. M. C. A. male chorus meets Tuesday evening for another rehearsal. All who have any intention of joining the chorus are urged to be present Tuesday night. Mr. E. T. Johnson expects to try some new music.

This evening at 7:30 the classes in arithmetic and German will begin their regular work. The text books for German class are here and Mr. Berger is anxious that all who expect to take the course should begin tonight.
